

Whispers Of Serenity

In the days of Yore when the seas glimmered a crystal glow a zephyr lingered by the shore whispering the tales of the world below

In fields of green, animals roamed which now the children study as faux their once wild spirits now tamed and owned their haven used for artificial hone

*The sight of the purple glow of the afternoon sky felt pristine no fog nor haze to engulf the sight of the sparkling lights which now if seen will seem more like a dream
The sparkling light, protected thousands from the monsters of the night*

The birds chirped melodies, sweet and Rhys Their songs of harmony for all to learn A melody that blossomed in the hearts of many the; tree of peace Embracing hearts and making broken spirits strong and stern

Oh! now, how the world is being killed Crying tears of help and sorrow Yet we continue to live our life being fulfilled Ignoring the one that gave us life only thinking about our morrow

In the sea's embrace, a sorrowful tune beneath the waves, pollution's cocoon where once was life, now lies strewn a grim reminder of our reckless boon

Once lush land now stands bare gone are trees replaced with waste luxuries prized, neglecting nature's care every sight a bitter taste

From zero hunger to oceans blue with each goal, unleash the path anew SDGs beckon, a mission true uniting nations, in what we pursue

*In every action let us be wise Protecting oceans, forests and skies
For Earth's survival, we harmonize With nature's rhythm, we will realize*

Gender equality, justice for all in every heart a noble demand for a world where every child stands tall with SDGs as our guiding hand

A world where peace and prosperity reign innovation thrives, energy saved harmony replaces vain and pain a sustainable preference always embraced

*A gauntlet for all, we take our stance no matter how hard, we'll advance no opportunity shall we leave to chance.
Together we will bring back the days of Yore*

Khyati Boruah & Adeena Farid

Sarala Birla Gyan Jyoti Assam, India